Celebration of Orchids

LAr. Phua Chin Eng
Institute of Landscape Architects Malaysia (ILAM)

Recycled timber and branches are neatly arranged in a circular form, gradually rising up towards the centre, forming a mountain of fire, designed by LAr. Phua Chin Eng. "Orchids exist not only on land but also in water," he adds, gesturing to the fire-coloured orchids suspended by black steel bars holding water-filled glass vases – purging out from the midst of the wooden structure. The purplish and red blossoms naturally enliven the whole display, interpreted as the "urban vibe" - the frenetic energy of everyday life. The orchids, cosmopolitan floral "citizens" found nearly everywhere on earth, really come to life, dancing around this stunning focal point.
